Mister Tealpeck,

This note is to let you know that on the 4th of Reaping, at great risk to many of my vessels and their fine lieutenants, I did secure at your request, a certain chest, borne by the dreaded Ship of Light, under the command of the Paladin Krehufnakut. At significant expense, I have defeated the traps and wards placed upon said chest, and have verified its contents as including one "Holy Path of Ethuknikar." Whereas the paladin transporting this valued asset has been forced to take up new residence in the watery deep, and whereas the loss of this asset and the ship bearing it will no doubt present certain inconveniences to the church of Heironeous in the south, and whereas these inconveniences are likely to translate to renewed patrols and trade restrictions that will no doubt present, in themselves, certain inconveniences to myself and to the entire Crimson Fleet, I regret that I must triple my initial demand, to more properly reflect the value of the asset I have secured on your behalf, and to defray the anticipated increase in business costs for our southerly activities. As previously agreed, I will personally meet your representative in the village of Torst on the last day of Harvester to finalize this transaction. Please ensure that, as per the terms of our agreement, your representative comes alone, unarmed, and bearing adequate funds to complete the purchase of our service.

Signed this day, the twelfth of Reaping in the common year five sixty-six.

Captain Gianni Arnesto

Though ye at last have gained admittance, By force of wit or perseverance,

I pray ye shall not be too bold,
And take more than your mind can hold.

Lest ye lament your greedy eye,
When watery death at last is nigh.

HA! HA! HA! I tricked you, you stupid human. Now the great one likes me more than you! You thought you could fool him, but I fooled you instead! You should never mess with people that are smarter than you. That would be like taking a book from the library that wasn't already in a box. I can't wait to start bossing YOU around for a change!
